

Meet some Instruments

Meet the violin

The violin is a member of the string family in the orchestra.

It has been used as a solo instrument for hundreds of years in both classical and traditional styles. It is made up of a hollow varnished soundboard, a long neck and four strings. The strings may be sounded by a bow or plucked with the finger. The type of string affects the quality of the sound.

